Join our community as we navigate through Indigenous Storytelling, Short Film Screenings, Artwork, and Panel discussions about increasing prevention awareness of HIV/AIDS and our hopes for the future in ending this epidemic. Every year the month of December is synonymous with the holiday season and the arrival of winter, while few people are actually aware that December 1st is World AIDS Day. A day of both grieving and celebration, people affected by HIV/AIDS across the globe congregate to memorialize those who have passed, to honor the resilience of those who are living with HIV/AIDS, and, most importantly, to increase awareness among those who will create tomorrow. This year, on December 5th, 2015 - First Light of the American Indian Community House HIV/AIDS Program in collaboration with the East Coast Two-Spirit Society will host an inter-tribal gathering in observance of World AIDS Day. The theme “Surviving the Epidemics” Lakota “Waniyetu Wówapi” Winter Count images set the tone for the importance of past, and present working together to survive epidemics that have affected our indigenous populations.
