

Making New York the Healthiest State Achieving the Triple Aim

Population Health Summit

December 3, 2013

8:00 a.m. – 4:30 p.m.

New York Academy of Sciences, NYC

New York State Health Commissioner, Nirav R. Shah, M.D., M.P.H. will convene a population health summit on December 3, 2013 to bring together state and national leaders to learn about the role public health and other sectors play in improving population health. Dr. Shah will be joined by Thomas R. Frieden, M.D., M.P.H., director of the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC), Thomas Farley, M.D., M.P.H., New York City Health Commissioner, Jeffrey Levi, Ph.D., executive director, Trust for America's Health, and Jo Ivey Boufford, M.D., president, New York Academy of Medicine. Invited presenters will provide insight into public health approaches to improving population health and how summit attendees can help achieve this.

Plenary sessions will focus on:

- Defining the Triple Aim to improve health care, reduce costs and improve health;
- Delineating the roles of health and non-health sectors in improving population health;
- Highlighting successful local Prevention Agenda coalitions of county health departments, hospitals, clinics, schools, business, community organizations philanthropy; and innovative work with hospitals through the New York City health department's Take Care New York initiative;
- Defining the roles of employers in improving the health of workers and their communities.
