

Survey on Community-Based Organizations (& free online survey tool)

BPHC is sending out a brief online survey to the members of our planning workgroups to understand the types of community services needed and specific organizations we may want to work with. It builds on the work from last year's CNA and the list of CBOs who are currently included in our PPS.

I thought it might be helpful to other folks since we invested some time in tailoring the descriptions of "community-based organizations" and categories of services to improve clarity for general audience. I also like Google Forms as an alternative resource to SurveyMonkey for quick, free surveys.

Email description accompanying link: "Recognizing the large impact that social determinants of health have on the Bronx population, BPHC is working to incorporate community services into our clinical operation planning.

As a first step, we ask you to complete this brief (~5 minute) online survey by Monday, September 14.

We want to understand both the type of services needed and level of demand, as well as to identify relevant organizations. We will use the survey responses to ground future discussions. We plan to use these inputs to create and maintain a database that will match patients to specific community services based on eligibility, need, and geographical location."
