Notice to Veterinarian:

Chapter 542 of the Laws of 1995 amended the education and public health laws to allow students enrolled in an advanced emergency medical technicians course, in which pediatric endotracheal intubation training is included, to perform endotracheal intubation on an animal under the immediate personal supervision of a licensed veterinarian or a licensed veterinary technician acting under the direct supervision of a veterinarian. The Medical Director's signature on the reverse side of this form indicates that this student has completed the required didactic and manikin training in human intubation and is eligible to participate in supervised animal endotracheal intubation.

All the following criteria must be met:

1. The animal endotracheal intubation is only performed under the immediate personal supervision of a licensed veterinarian, or a licensed veterinary technician under the supervision of a veterinarian, as defined in Section 6709 of the State Education Law.
2. Animal endotracheal intubation is only performed on an animal when a medically indicated procedure, treatment or operation is performed for any non-emergency disease, pain, injury, deformity, or physical condition of the animal.
3. Animal endotracheal intubation is only performed when the animal is properly sedated or anesthetized.
4. Animal endotracheal intubation is performed no more than once per animal by no more than one certified emergency medical technician.
5. The animal owner, or where such owner is unknown, the person having lawful charge of custody of the animal, consents in writing to the performance of endotracheal intubation by a certified emergency medical technician.
